THE CORRECT MATHEMATICS OF OPERATIONS RESULTS HOST: COMPUTER OR PAPER? Economics is all about values. It is not just numbers and data. It is an inquiry into what is valued and what is not, and why. It is about why one public policy is better than another. It is about why one private solution is better than another. It is about choices. Markets are quite obvious choices: either a buyer or seller both have incomes and goods. It should be a pretty straight choice between the two. But every good thing has a price. And every buyer and seller of every good is assumed to be out for what their own free choice, not what others want to pay or give them. Asking: why does one good cost more than another good? What is the difference between the goods? How does one estimate the costs of production? How does one estimate what others will be willing to pay for this good? It is quite easy, at least for me, to calculate the prices. I just keep subtracting out the cost of production. HOST: COMPUTER OR PAPER? Economics is all about values. To determine the frequency of urological pathologies in Guinea-Bissau as well as the pathogens involved, we performed a prospective study of common urological pathologies, from November 2004 to October 2005, in patients aged 15 years or older presenting at 5 hospitals in Bissau. The overall incidence rate of urological pathologies was 959 per 100,000 inhabitants/year (CI 95% 810-1090). The major urological pathologies seen were benign prostate hyperplasia (n = 123, 13.4%), urolithiasis (n = 276, 30.3%), ureteral calculi (n = 105, 11.4%), and urological infections (n = 161, 17.6%). The overall prevalence of urological pathologies was of 2.5% (137 cases). Significant urinary tract infections were observed in 103 patients (11.2%), of whom 98 (92.5%) had lower urinary tract symptoms. Urine cultures were performed in all patients who had symptoms of lower urinary tract infections. Thirty-three patients (15.8%) were diagnosed as having urinary schistosomiasis and 9 (4.4%) as having e 50b96ab0b6

Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a device for adjusting the torsion angle between a drive shaft and a driven shaft. 2. Description of the Prior Art In a conventional device for adjusting the torsion angle between a drive shaft and a driven shaft, an adjustment collar is fixed to a housing and an inner shaft having a plurality of first grooves and a plurality of second grooves engageable with the first grooves and capable of being restricted rotation relative to the housing is rotatably provided in the housing. A follower pin is provided in each of the second grooves, and a torsion angle adjustor having a plurality of protrusions and a plurality of convex and concave grooves engageable with the protrusions and rotatable relative to the housing is provided adjacent the adjustment collar. The adjustment collar is mounted on the housing by engaging the plurality of second grooves with the protrusions of the torsion angle adjustor to lock the adjustment collar relative to the housing. A control plate having a plurality of holes are attached to the adjustment collar, and a plurality of adjustment bolts provided in the housing engage the holes, thereby adjusting the torsion angle between the drive shaft and the driven shaft. In this manner, the torsion angle can be adjusted. In such a conventional device for adjusting the torsion angle between a drive shaft and a driven shaft, however, in order to adjust the torsion angle between the drive shaft and the driven shaft, the adjustment bolts are inserted into the holes in the control plate and are turned at a plurality of positions, thereby adjusting the torsion angle between the drive shaft and the driven shaft. Hence, it takes time and effort to make the torsion angle adjustment. This invention relates to a method for making a multilayered web and to an apparatus for carrying out the method. In the manufacture of a multilayered paper or cardboard web, a paper or cardboard web is produced which comprises a plurality of layers of material, and this web can be used as a constructional element, for example as a box or a cup, or it can be a liner which
